THE TUSCARAWAS VALLEY.—What is Being Done Along the Line of the Road.—An INTELLIGENCER reporter, in conversation with a gentleman connected with the Tuscarawas Valley Railroad, yesterday, elicited the following facts in connection with the road: The company have purchased the old Belmont pianing mill property and fifteen adjoining lots, in Kirkwood, for the sum of $5,000, which is considered a fair price. The property will be used for yards, machine shops and the cicterus necessary for a first-class railroad. Work along the line of the road between this city and Flushing tunnels has been entirely suspended, with the exception of tunnel work, and it is not likely that it will be resumed before spring fairly sets in, the earth being too wet to handle to advantage. Father Boyle then came forward, and pan in price. In order to ascertain the reason for the same, we yesterday called on several merchants who deal largely in cured meats, and interviewed them on the subject. The reasons assigned were many, the greatest of which is that the market is completely glutted and is becoming more so every day. "Chicago alone," said one of the merchants, "packed two and a half million of hogs during the past season, and Cincinnati one hundred thousand more than she did the year previous, and at the present time stock pork is continually coming in the market. The export trade," continued the dealer, "has fallen off wonderfully, while the hence consumption is not near so heavy as it used to be, owing probably to the hard times."

Ham is now lower than it ever has

Ham is now lower than it ever has been sicce 1881, and it is said the present price of the article will not pay the first cost of the product, to say nothing about the curing, packing, and shipping of it. The late troubles in the East have no doubt had much to do with the present low price, as it has kept the market in a continual state of excitement and has caused many fluctuations, which, to say the least, have not contributed to its healthfulness.
